

Landing Page Evaluation Worksheet

A structured way to evaluate the page behind an ad: relevance, clarity, trust, friction, mobile experience, measurement, and the path to conversion.

Understand the situation first.

Use evidence, not assumptions, to decide what to do next.

Designed to produce an evidence-based page review before traffic is scaled.

How to use this worksheet

Open the actual landing page and work through the sections in order. Write what you can observe. Avoid jumping straight to recommendations. A useful audit says what is happening, why it may matter, and what evidence would confirm the issue.

Evaluation principle: the page does not need to look a certain way. It needs to make sense for the intent behind the traffic and make the next step clear enough for the right visitor to take it.

1. Campaign and page context

Field	Record
Campaign / ad group
Primary search intent
Ad headline / promise
Final URL
Primary conversion
Secondary actions observed
Audience / location
Date reviewed
Reviewer

2. Query -> Ad -> Page continuity

Google landing-page guidance centers on relevance, usefulness, navigation, and meeting the expectations created by the ad. Review the three-part chain as one experience.

Check	Observation	Evidence / example
Search intent is clear
Ad promise matches the page
Headline matches the visitor goal
Offer / product / service is the same
Location or audience relevance is clear
CTA is appropriate to the intent

3. Above-the-fold clarity

A visitor should not have to reconstruct the proposition from scattered elements. The first screen should make the basic story understandable: what this is, why it matters, and what to do next.

- Can a first-time visitor explain what the business is offering within a few seconds?
- Is the main value proposition specific enough to distinguish the offer from a generic category?
- Is the primary CTA visually clear without being deceptive or overly aggressive?
- Does the page explain who the offer is for?
- Are the most important proof points visible without excessive scrolling?

Write the visitor likely first question: _____

Write the answer the page gives: _____

What is still unclear? _____

4. Trust and proof

Trust element	Present?	Strong / weak / unclear	Notes
Business identity / contact information
Reviews / testimonials
Credentials / experience
Case studies / results
Security / payment cues (where relevant)
Policies / guarantees / returns (where relevant)
Pricing or cost context (where appropriate)

5. Offer and information quality

- Core features are described in terms the intended customer can understand.
- Important limitations, requirements, exclusions, or conditions are not hidden.
- Pricing or quote expectations are clear enough for the decision stage.
- The page answers practical questions before the CTA asks for commitment.
- Images support the offer rather than simply filling space.
- Product/service specifications are accurate and consistent with the ad.

6. Conversion path

Step	What happens	Friction observed
CTA click

Step	What happens	Friction observed
Form / cart / booking
Confirmation
Follow-up / fulfillment

7. Mobile evaluation

Google mobile guidance emphasizes fast loading, clear navigation, and making it easy for people to find what they need on a smaller screen. Evaluate the actual mobile experience rather than assuming a responsive layout is enough.

- Page loads without obvious delays or layout shifts that interfere with the task.
- Navigation does not obscure the primary action.
- Text is readable without awkward zooming.
- Buttons and form controls are large enough and easy to activate.
- Phone links, maps, booking tools, and checkout work on a real mobile device.
- Important proof, pricing, and policies remain accessible.

8. Technical and performance signals

Area	What to review	Result / evidence
HTTPS / destination
Redirects / final URL
Broken resources / console errors
Core page content available without fragile scripts
Page speed / Core Web Vitals evidence
Analytics / Google tag
Conversion tracking
UTM / attribution

9. Measurement readiness

A landing page can look successful while tracking the wrong thing. Google Ads currently distinguishes primary conversion actions used for bidding from secondary actions generally used for observation. Record the actual configuration you find.

Measurement item	Configured?	Primary / secondary / other	Verified?
Main conversion
Form submit / purchase / call
Micro-actions
Analytics events
Value / revenue

10. Friction inventory

- Too many competing CTAs

- Unclear pricing or next step
- Long or unnecessary form
- Weak trust evidence
- Message does not match the ad
- Slow or unstable page
- Mobile interaction problem
- Broken or confusing confirmation
- Missing information needed for the decision
- Technical measurement gap

Observed evidence / URLs / screenshots to capture

1. _____
2. _____
3. _____

11. Findings: separate facts from interpretations

This section is intentionally simple. Write what you saw first. Then write what you think it may mean. That keeps an audit from turning into a collection of assumptions.

Observation (fact)	Why it may matter	How to verify

12. Prioritize tests

Test / change	Hypothesis	Primary metric	What would count as success

13. Overall assessment

Dimension	Assessment	Confidence
Relevance to ad/query
Clarity of offer
Trust / proof
CTA / conversion path
Mobile experience
Performance
Measurement

What appears to be working? _____

What appears to be limiting the page? _____

What evidence would change this assessment? _____

Recommended next step: _____

Sources

Google Ads - Landing page

<https://support.google.com/google-ads/answer/14086>

Google Ads - Evaluate the performance of your landing pages

<https://support.google.com/google-ads/answer/7543502>

Google Ads - Optimize your website for mobile

<https://support.google.com/google-ads/answer/7323900>

Google Ads - About primary and secondary conversion actions

<https://support.google.com/google-ads/answer/11461796>