
CHECKLIST

Social Media Profile Optimization Checklist

Review profile identity, descriptions, links, visual consistency, contact paths, content positioning, governance, and discoverability.

Pulse Analytics Group LLC

Free Resources Library

A social profile is often a landing page people reach before they ever visit your website.

Use this checklist to review the profile itself, not the entire social strategy. The goal is to make sure a person who discovers the account can quickly understand who the business is, what it offers, whether the account appears current and legitimate, and what to do next.

Platform features change. Complete the universal checks first, then use the platform-specific sections that match the accounts you actually operate. Where a feature varies by region, account type, or eligibility, verify the current platform documentation rather than treating the feature as universal.

Profile review record

Business / brand	_____
Reviewer	_____
Date	_____
Profiles in scope	☐ Facebook ☐ Instagram ☐ LinkedIn ☐ TikTok ☐ YouTube ☐ X ☐ Other
Primary destination	_____

1. Identity and recognition

[] The profile name is recognizable and matches the business's current public identity.

Verify: Compare the visible profile name with the website and other official channels.

Why it matters: Recognition is harder when the account uses an unrelated name.

Common problem: Old business name remains on one platform.

[] The username/handle is intentional and reasonably consistent.

Verify: Record each handle and confirm it can be understood and shared without explanation.

Why it matters: Consistent naming helps customers connect accounts that belong to the same organization.

Common problem: A handle is unrelated to the brand or uses an obsolete abbreviation.

[] The profile image is current and recognizable at small size.

Verify: View it on both a small-screen layout and a desktop layout where available.

Why it matters: Profile images are often seen at very small sizes.

Common problem: A detailed logo becomes unreadable when cropped.

[] Cover/banner imagery supports the current positioning.

Verify: Check desktop and mobile crops where the platform uses them.

Why it matters: The banner can reinforce what the business is about without replacing the profile description.

Common problem: Important text is hidden by responsive cropping.

[] The account clearly appears to be an official business presence.

Verify: Check links, identity, ownership indicators, and consistency with the website.

Why it matters: Visitors should not have to guess whether the account is genuine.

Common problem: The profile lacks enough identifying information to connect it to the business.

2. Profile description and positioning

[] The bio/about/description explains what the business does.

Verify: Read the profile without clicking anywhere else.

Why it matters: The profile itself should answer the basic “what is this?” question.

Common problem: The description is only a slogan.

[] The intended audience is identifiable.

Verify: Look for wording that indicates who the account serves when relevant.

Why it matters: Audience clarity helps visitors decide whether the profile is relevant.

Common problem: The bio could describe almost any company.

[] The main offer or category is understandable.

Verify: Check that service/product terms are plain enough for the intended audience.

Why it matters: A profile can be discoverable without being clear; both matter.

Common problem: Industry jargon replaces a plain explanation.

[] The primary call to action is clear.

Verify: Identify the action you want a new visitor to take.

Why it matters: Too many competing CTAs can make the next step ambiguous.

Common problem: The profile sends visitors to several unrelated destinations.

3. Website and link path

[] The website link points to the intended current destination.

Verify: Open the link from the profile.

Why it matters: A broken or outdated URL loses traffic and trust.

Common problem: The link still points to an old domain or campaign.

[] The destination matches the profile promise.

Verify: Compare the page title, offer, and first visible content with the profile CTA.

Why it matters: A click should lead to the thing the profile said it would lead to.

Common problem: The profile promotes a service but the link opens a generic homepage with no context.

[] Links are tested on mobile.

Verify: Use a real mobile device or browser emulation.

Why it matters: A link that works on desktop can still produce a poor mobile path.

Common problem: A mobile redirect, pop-up, or layout problem blocks the next step.

[] Campaign or tracking parameters are used when appropriate.

Verify: Check whether the organization has a consistent UTM convention and whether the destination supports it.

Why it matters: Consistent tracking can help separate social traffic from other sources.

Common problem: Different people create inconsistent parameters that cannot be reported cleanly.

4. Contact and conversion path

[] A prospective customer can identify how to contact the business.

Verify: Test the available contact options from the profile.

Why it matters: A visitor should not have to search the internet for a way to reach the business.

Common problem: The profile has a website but no obvious contact path.

[] The primary action matches the business model.

Verify: Check booking, inquiry, purchase, visit, call, message, or other relevant action.

Why it matters: The most visible action should reflect what the business actually wants customers to do.

Common problem: The button leads to a retired form.

[] Forms and booking links work end-to-end.

Verify: Complete a test submission where appropriate.

Why it matters: A working button is not enough if the next step fails.

Common problem: The form submits but nobody receives the notification.

[] The post-click experience keeps the same brand identity.

Verify: Compare heading, logo, language, and offer on the destination page.

Why it matters: Inconsistent handoffs can reduce confidence.

Common problem: Social profile looks current but the landing page uses old branding.

5. Content positioning and visible freshness

[] The most visible content reflects the current business.

Verify: Review pinned, featured, or most recent content depending on the platform.

Why it matters: Visitors often judge the account by the first few pieces of content they see.

Common problem: Old offers or retired services are still featured.

[] Recent content supports the profile's stated positioning.

Verify: Sample recent posts against the profile description.

Why it matters: A profile can say one thing while its content repeatedly suggests something else.

Common problem: The bio says "web development" while the recent feed focuses on an unrelated service.

[] Promotional content is balanced with useful or informative content when appropriate.

Verify: Look at the actual mix rather than a required percentage.

Why it matters: The right mix depends on audience and business model; the point is to avoid a profile that feels disconnected from its stated purpose.

Common problem: Every recent post is a sales message.

[] Visual treatments are reasonably consistent.

Verify: Check colors, logo use, typography, image treatment, and recurring formats.

Why it matters: Consistency makes the account easier to recognize.

Common problem: Every post comes from a different template.

[] Old or misleading content is reviewed intentionally.

Verify: Identify posts that could confuse a new visitor and decide whether they should remain visible.

Why it matters: Not every old post needs removal; the question is whether it still represents the business accurately.

Common problem: Expired promotions remain prominently visible.

6. Account access, ownership, and security

[] The business controls the account through appropriate owner/admin access.

Verify: Record who owns the account and who has administrative permissions.

Why it matters: A business should not depend on one person's personal login or an unknown former employee.

Common problem: Only a former employee has access.

[] Two-step verification is enabled where supported.

Verify: Check the account security settings.

Why it matters: Account takeover can interrupt a major public-facing channel.

Common problem: Security is handled only by a shared password.

[] Recovery information is current.

Verify: Review recovery email, phone, and other account recovery methods.

Why it matters: Recovery details are especially important if staffing changes.

Common problem: The account is tied to an old employee's email.

[] Access is documented.

Verify: Keep an internal record of owners, admins, recovery procedures, and the date last reviewed.

Why it matters: Documentation reduces operational risk during staff turnover.

Common problem: Nobody can explain who has access.

7. Cross-platform consistency

[] Business name and description are consistent in meaning across active profiles.

Verify: Compare the current wording side by side.

Why it matters: Customers should be able to recognize the same organization across channels.

Common problem: Each profile was written independently.

[] Profile imagery uses the same visual identity system.

Verify: Compare logo/photo crops, banners, colors, and templates.

Why it matters: A recognizable visual system improves continuity.

Common problem: One profile uses a completely different logo.

[] Website and contact information agree across platforms.

Verify: Open each link and compare the destination and contact details.

Why it matters: Conflicting information creates unnecessary friction.

Common problem: An old phone number remains on one account.

[] Profile CTAs are aligned with the current business priority.

Verify: Record the action shown or emphasized on each account.

Why it matters: Different channels can have different CTAs, but the differences should be intentional.

Common problem: One channel promotes a retired offer.

8. Platform-specific verification

Use only the rows that match accounts you actually manage. Platform features and availability can change.

Facebook Page

- [] Page action button is current and points to the intended next step.
- [] Page information and business identity match the current website.
- [] Profile and cover imagery use current brand assets.
- [] A test visitor can find the website/contact path without ambiguity.

Platform note: Meta documents an editable Page action button. Verify current Page controls in the account because interfaces can change.

Instagram

- [] Username and display name match the current business identity.
- [] Profile image is recognizable at small size.
- [] Bio clearly explains the business and primary action.
- [] Website/link destination works on mobile.
- [] Highlights/featured content, where used, reflects the current business.

Platform note: Use the account's current in-app options when verifying available links, buttons, and professional-profile features.

LinkedIn Page

- [] Page name and public identity match the business.
- [] Logo and cover image use current brand assets.
- [] Company description clearly explains what the organization does.
- [] Website and other Page details are current.
- [] The Page is connected to appropriate employee/company identities where relevant.

Platform note: LinkedIn provides current guidance on Page creation, identity, profile details, and image specifications.

TikTok

- [] Account type is appropriate for the business's purpose.
- [] Username, nickname, bio, and profile photo are complete and current.
- [] Website link is present when the account is eligible and the site is part of the intended conversion path.
- [] Security/recovery information is controlled by the business.
- [] The visible profile and recent content match the business identity.

Platform note: TikTok states that Business Accounts can post a website link on their profile; features can vary by account and location.

Google Business Profile social links

- [] Current social profile links are added where the feature is available.
- [] Each linked platform uses the correct URL format.
- [] Links resolve to the intended official profiles.
- [] Duplicates, broken links, and unsupported destinations are removed.

Platform note: Google currently supports one social-media link per supported platform on a Business Profile, where the feature is available.

9. Final profile review

A profile is ready for routine operation when the important customer-facing pieces are current, connected, and owned.

Review item	Pass	Needs attention	N/A
Business identity is recognizable	☐	☐	☐
Description explains what the business does	☐	☐	☐
Audience and positioning are clear	☐	☐	☐
Profile image and banner are current	☐	☐	☐
Website link works	☐	☐	☐
Primary CTA works	☐	☐	☐
Contact path works	☐	☐	☐
Recent/featured content reflects current positioning	☐	☐	☐
Cross-platform information is consistent	☐	☐	☐
Ownership and security are documented	☐	☐	☐
Relevant platform-specific requirements have been verified	☐	☐	☐

Issues found / evidence

Review date

Next routine review	_____
Trigger for earlier review	_____
Owner	_____

Current references

- Google Business Profile - Manage your social media links: <https://support.google.com/business/answer/13580646>
- Google Business Profile - Edit your Business Profile: <https://support.google.com/business/answer/3039617>
- Google Business Profile - Guidelines for representing your business: <https://support.google.com/business/answer/3038177>
- Facebook Help - Edit or delete your Page's action button: <https://www.facebook.com/help/messenger-app/1638565256396310>

- LinkedIn Help - Create a LinkedIn Page: <https://www.linkedin.com/help/linkedin/answer/a545752>
- LinkedIn Help - Create a LinkedIn Page best practices: <https://www.linkedin.com/help/linkedin/answer/a553289>
- LinkedIn Help - Image specifications for LinkedIn Pages: <https://www.linkedin.com/help/linkedin/answer/a563309>
- TikTok Support - Linking a website or social media account:
<https://support.tiktok.com/en/getting-started/setting-up-your-profile/linking-another-social-media-account>
- TikTok Support - Account types:
<https://support.tiktok.com/en/using-tiktok/growing-your-audience/switching-to-a-creator-or-business-account>